TODAY

I remember slow December
Behind the street lights, they stared directly at you
I remember singing drearily
And on that night they sang along, sang along

I remember slow December
Behind the street lights, they stared directly at you
I remember singing drearily
And on that night they sang along, sang along

And the scenes from your dreams
Spun like lights
They diffracted in discord
They danced like mad

And I remember rolling clouds
The thunder rolled as spring arrived
The drawings you had made
Dissolved in lead and faded in the rain

I remember you seemed sadder
(And you didn't care)
Your eyes were lifeless, they stared directly at you
(And you didn't care)

And the scenes from your dreams
Spun like lights
They diffracted in discord
They danced like mad

And your dreams made you another disillusioned part of today
And your eyes fluttered side to side avoiding my smile
Wishing me away, wishing me away
I never left you alone

And I made you another disillusioned part of today
At the time, you had said to throw away those drawings you made
So I hung them up all across the walls
I never left you alone
